Introductory Note

The Department of Philology belongs to the School of Humanities and Cultural Studies (S.H.C.S.). It was officially established in the academic year 2003–2004, with its academic operations commencing in 2005–2006. The Department is in the city of Kalamata and is housed in the renovated premises of the former 9th Infantry Regiment, situated within the old military camp. These facilities have been converted into modern lecture halls and offices, fully equipped with the necessary infrastructure to ensure high-quality and safe academic functioning.

University of the Peloponnese

The University of the Peloponnese was established by Presidential Decree No. 13/2000 and commenced its academic operation in 2002, with its central administration based in Tripoli, Greece.

Following the implementation of Law 4610/2019, the University now operates in the capitals of the regional units of the Peloponnese (Tripoli, Corinthos, Nafplio, Sparti, Kalamata) as well as in the city of Patras.

The University comprises nine Schools and twenty-two (22) academic Departments, offering a full range of undergraduate, postgraduate and doctoral programs, as well as lifelong learning and continuous education opportunities.

The legal and institutional framework of the University is governed by the provisions applying to all Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) in Greece, as defined in Laws 4009/2011 and 4957/2022, as currently in force.

University Administration

According to Law 4957/2022 (Government Gazette A' 141), the University is governed by the following bodies:

- the Administrative Council
- the Rector
- the Vice Rectors
- the Senate
- the Executive Director

School of Humanities and Cultural Studies (S.H.C.S.)

The School of Humanities and Cultural Studies (S.H.C.S.) of the University of the Peloponnese was established by Presidential Decree No. 118/2003, entitled "Establishment of Schools and Departments at the University of the Peloponnese" (Government Gazette 102/05.05.2003, Series A).

It comprises two Departments: the Department of History, Archaeology and Cultural Resources Management and the Department of Philology.

The School is housed in the buildings of the former 9th Infantry Regiment, situated within the old military camp of Kalamata, which were granted for academic use by the Municipality of Kalamata. The two traditional buildings, constructed in the late 19th century, have been converted into fully functional lecture halls and offices, equipped with all necessary infrastructure to ensure their proper and safe operation.

The former Headquarters Building of the military camp, a neoclassical structure of notable aesthetic value, was fully renovated under the care of the Municipality of Kalamata, with funding from the A.G. Leventis Foundation.

The partial renovation of the old Barracks Buildings of the camp was made possible through the generous donation of Vassilios Constantakopoulos and Konstantinos Arnokouros, while the full restoration of the remaining barracks was completed in July 2008, financed by the Regional Operational Programme of the Peloponnese 2000–2006 (3rd CSF) and co-funded by the European Regional Development Fund (E.R.D.F.).

The academic programs, research activity, and cultural and community outreach of the School aim to provide students with a solid and broad theoretical foundation, as well as the essential practical skills required to meet the challenges and opportunities in the fields it serves.

Office Hours for Student Services

The Secretariat of the Department of Philology is open to students Monday through Friday, from 11:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

Mission of the Department of Philology

The primary concern of the Department of Philology is to ensure the provision of high-quality undergraduate and postgraduate education for its students. This includes both solid theoretical knowledge and the equally vital areas of practical training and research specialization.

Through a wide range of academic, research, and cultural activities—and by taking full advantage of its modern infrastructure and state-of-the-art technological resources—the Department aims to offer a comprehensive academic education across the various disciplines of philological studies and Greek culture.

The Department's mission is:

1. To cultivate and promote knowledge of Ancient and Modern Greek literature, language, and linguistics, and to study the philosophical movements that have influenced their development.
2. To contribute to the study of the impact of the ancient Greek and Byzantine heritage on modern Greek and European culture, and to explore the elements that shape its universal value today.
3. To provide students with the necessary tools—knowledge, skills, and competencies—for their academic and professional careers.

The Department offers three informal thematic areas of study: Classical Philology, Byzantine and Modern Greek Philology, and Linguistics. It combines traditional fields of study —such as Ancient Greek Philology, Latin Philology, Byzantine and Modern Greek Philology, Linguistics, the History of the Greek Language, Palaeography, Papyrology, History, Philosophy, Folklore, and Pedagogy— with newer areas of specialization, including:

- Literary Theory
- Comparative Literature
- World Literature
- Corpus Linguistics
- Special Didactics
- Teaching Philological Subjects Using ICT
- Use of Digital Tools in Philological Research
- Special Education and Integration Pedagogy

This broad and integrated curriculum constitutes a distinct advantage compared to other Departments of Greek Philology nationwide.

Through its Study Program, the Department of Philology endeavors to advance scientific knowledge and provide higher education in the afore-mentioned thematic areas according to international standards. At the same time, it equips its graduates with the pedagogical competencies necessary to transmit their knowledge effectively and confidently.

Furthermore, the Department is actively engaged in broadening the linguistic and interpretive horizons of its students by developing robust postgraduate programs, organizing a variety of intellectual and artistic events, operating innovative research laboratories, and strengthening its ties with both the national and international academic community.

Department of Philology – Facilities

Administrative Services

The Secretariat of the Department of Philology is in the Administration Building, close to the teaching facilities, and is easily accessible to both students and academic staff. The administrative organization and support of the Department is carried out by two Secretariat Officers.

Library

The Library and Information Centre (LIC) of the University of the Peloponnese, Kalamata Branch, operates in two halls: the Georgia Xanthaki-Karamanou Hall (West Wing) and the Konstantinos N. Sathas Hall (East Wing), located within the Old Military Camp premises in Kalamata, where the teaching facilities of the School of Humanities and Cultural Studies are also housed.

The total area of the Library is 360 m², and it includes reading rooms equipped with 15 computers for accessing the Library's Online Public Access Catalog (OPAC): <http://opac.library.uop.gr>

The Library's collection includes: 36,689 books, 6,789 offprints, 1,341 journal titles (12,082 issues), 1,739 undergraduate theses, 851 postgraduate theses, 175 doctoral dissertations.

More than 12,500 books are loaned annually to the academic community, and this number steadily increases each year. Cataloging and classification follow the Library of Congress Classification System.

The mission of the LIC is to support the educational and research needs of the academic community, while also contributing to the intellectual and cultural development of the broader public.

Loan Policy

The Library operates as lending library for all its material except for: Journals and newspapers, Reference books (e.g., dictionaries, encyclopedias, guides), Maps, Rare or very old books, Manuscripts and archival materials, Photographs, Microfiches.

Eligible users include all members of the academic community, with borrowing privileges as follows:

- Faculty members and academic staff: up to 5 items for 15 days, with 2 possible renewals
- Postgraduate students and PhD candidates: up to 5 items for 15 days, with 2 renewals
- Undergraduate students and exchange students: up to 3 items for 7 days, with 2 renewals
- Administrative, scientific and technical staff: up to 5 items for 15 days, with 2 renewals

Renewals are possible provided no reservation has been made by another user. The item must be presented in person before or on the due date. After two renewals, the item must be returned, and it may be borrowed again by the same user after a 3-day interval.

To activate borrowing privileges, users must either hold an academic ID or request a Library Membership Card. This process is completed at the Library upon submission of an application form. The card is personal and non-transferable. Loss or change of user information must be reported for reissuance.

Library Use and Access

The LIC is an open-access library. Users may search for materials via available computers or directly from the shelves using classification codes. Searches can also be conducted remotely at <http://opac.library.uop.gr>.

Additional Library Services

a) Interlibrary Loan

Users may borrow up to 3 books from other academic libraries through the Interlibrary Loan Service, provided the books are not available in the LIC's collection. Requests are made through the Union Catalogue of Greek Academic Libraries. Books typically arrive within four working days. The lending period is set by the supplying library, and users cover shipping costs.

b) Access to Electronic Resources

Users have access to a wide range of online journals, encyclopedias, dictionaries, and e-books via the Library website. Remote access is available through VPN for all academic community members.

Wireless internet access is provided throughout the Library via the EDUROAM network for use with laptops, tablets, smartphones, and other devices.

Lecture Rooms & Seminar Facilities

The Department of Philology is equipped with seven (7) lecture rooms, and—if necessary—three (3) additional lecture rooms from the Department of History, Archaeology and Cultural Resources Management (D.H.A.C.R.M.) are also available for use.

All teaching rooms of the School of Humanities and Cultural Studies are fully equipped with modern audiovisual systems, computer connectivity, whiteboards, and air conditioning. In addition, all rooms are accessible to individuals with disabilities (PWDs).

This infrastructure supports and enhances student-centered learning, allowing for the implementation of flexible and interactive teaching methods. For example, in courses on modern literature, students may engage with related cultural material (visual arts, music, etc.) through parallel online exploration, fostering an interdisciplinary and immersive learning experience.

Digital Humanities Laboratory

The Digital Humanities Laboratory serves as a specialized space for the integration of technology in the study and teaching of the humanities. Courses offered in this facility include training in digital tools and resources relevant to philological disciplines, such as:

- Thesaurus Linguae Graecae (TLG) for Ancient Greek texts
- Thesaurus Linguae Latinae (TLL) for Latin texts
- Perseus Digital Library
- Portal for the Greek Language
- Electronic bibliographies and dictionaries
- Specialized software and online platforms supporting philological research and teaching, including resources for Special Didactics for students with learning disabilities.

The Laboratory is equipped with 27 personal computers and supports research projects focused on the application of new technologies in philology.

Computer Laboratory

The Department fully meets its teaching needs in the field of Information Technology as applied to philological studies, through a fully equipped Computer Laboratory. This facility is used for both curriculum-based IT courses and supportive training sessions in digital literacy offered to students.

The Computer Laboratory includes a central server and 27 personal computers. All computers are equipped with office application software and are connected to printers and scanners.

Students also have full Internet access to support their academic needs, such as using digital libraries and research databases, accessing university portals and international academic websites, sending and receiving academic emails, and more.

“Nikolaos Politis” Auditorium – S.H.C.S.

The School of Humanities and Cultural Studies is equipped with a fully functional auditorium, named “Nikolaos Politis”, which includes modern audiovisual systems. It hosts conferences, seminars, and lecture series organized by the Department’s Research Laboratories. These events support the operation and promotion of the postgraduate programs and contribute to the Department’s outreach and public engagement.

All events held in the auditorium are open to the public.

For inquiries and reservations regarding the use of the “Nikolaos Politis” Auditorium, please contact the Secretariat of the School of Humanities and Cultural Studies:

Tel.: +30 27210 65101

E-mail: hum-dean@uop.gr

Auxiliary Spaces (Modular Units)

By decision of the Dean’s Office of the S.H.C.S. (Meeting No. 9/28.01.2021), three ancillary buildings (nos. 3, 4, and 7 on the official floor plan) have been allocated to the Department of Philology.

These buildings are used primarily as faculty offices or storage places to support the Department’s academic and operational needs.

Department Administration

According to the legal framework for higher education (Law 4957/2022), university departments promote science, technology, or the arts within their respective academic disciplines. They are responsible for organizing instruction within the framework of the Study Programs and for ensuring the continuous improvement of learning outcomes.

The governing bodies of the Department of Philology are:

a) the Department Assembly, b) the Head of the Department, and c) the Vice Head of the Department

Their responsibilities are defined by Law 4957/2022, as currently in force.

Department Assembly

The Department Assembly is the highest collective governing and decision-making body. It consists of:

- the Head of the Department
- the Vice Head of the Department
- all members of the Teaching and Research Faculty (TRF) of the Department
- one (1) representative from each of the following categories (if applicable):
 - Special Teaching Staff (STS)
 - Laboratory Teaching Staff (LTS)
 - Special Technical Laboratory Staff (STLS)
- student representatives, with at least one (1) representative per level of study.

Student representatives may vote only on matters related to the organization of study programs and other student-related issues.
